

Vocationalism?: Past, Present And Future

Date: Friday 17th July 2015

10.00am – 4.00pm

Venue: Room G16, 9-11
Endsleigh Gardens, London,
WC1H 0EH

Call for papers

Following the successful series of three events on vocational education and training to celebrate BERA's 40th centenary, this is a call for papers on the same theme. This is another chance to enable scholars to contribute to the further debate on this theme. Quality papers from this event will have the possibility of being included in an edited book on this area.

Some of the possible areas for submission may include, but are by no means exclusive to the following:

- Definitions of vocationalism
- Theoretical frameworks of related pedagogy
- Distinctiveness and characteristics of the area
- Relationships with other work or occupation-related education and training programmes
- Impact on teacher education

The aim of this one-day event is to bring together cutting edge researchers, like-minded participants and interested parties to share, discuss and facilitate possible collaborations in this area. The deadlines for this event are:

Submission of a 500 word abstract by the 27th March 2015

Announcement of the successful abstracts by the 10th April 2015

Submission of full papers by the 3rd July 2015

For all correspondence, please e-mail Sai Loo at s.loo@ioe.ac.uk. The organisers of this event are: Professor Jill Jameson, University of Greenwich and Sai Loo, UCL Institute of Education, University College London.

Price: BERA members £5.00, Non-BERA members £20.00
